Pssst, you want in on where the celebrities head for winter? Here's a hint: It's not some fancy resort or spa in the hills of Los Angeles. Instead, they head for the mountains of Wyoming. From Uma Thurman to Ron Howard, celebrities are flocking to Spring Creek Ranch in Jackson Hole, Wyoming, to experience its posh accommodations and nature-focused surroundings.

Spring Creek Ranch is located on a 1,000-acre wildlife sanctuary surrounded by the Teton mountain range. It offers the luxurious accommodations that would have been fit for a star like Elizabeth Taylor, but the rugged, outdoorsy, western vibe that would have attracted the likes of John Wayne and cowboy enthusiasts. Spring Creek Ranch's Wilderness Adventure Spa has topped the list of many publications as a destination spa. It sits 1,000 feet above the town of Jackson and offers many treatments and activities that will help you disconnect from the outside world and reach a new level of health, fitness, and relaxation. For those looking for a bit more activity, there's plenty to do, from wildlife and natural history safaris, hot air balloon rides, and chuckwagon dinners, to horseback riding and rock climbing. For winter activities, visit cigarsandleisure.com.

While taking in the mesmerizing landscape and wildlife, guests can escape the clutches of drab city life by staying in the ranch's cabins, condos, or mountain villas made of fir, lodgepole, or spruce pine. The accommodations aren't the only thing that attracts high-end visitors. Amenities such as a heated, outdoor infinity pool, high-thread-count linens, and heated floors are sure to make it hard for you to want to hop on a plane back home anytime soon. ■
